dba

What is the DBA?

Founded in 1986 as the trade association for the UK design sector.

Set up by design agency owners to be an organisation owned by the members working for the members.

The three main aims are just as relevant today:

- To represent the interests of design businesses
- To help support the running of those businesses
- To help influence the environment in which they work

The DBA has two membership categories:

Agency membership

All disciplines, all sizes, all corners of the UK.

In-house design team membership

Design-led businesses who manage and/or commission design such as Diageo, Haleon, NatWest Group, Philips, LSEG, Carlsberg, Arup, Lixil and Transport for London.

We also have an accreditation service for consultants who can help you with your business. The Experts Register features individuals who are experts in areas such as new business and marketing, finance, law, HR, business growth, design management etc.

Community

Share experience with like-minded businesses and design leaders. DBA members vary in shape, size and design discipline from international corporate design teams such as Diageo, Reckitt and TfL, through world-leading design firms, to micro design studios the length and breadth of the UK, but there is an intimacy and willingness to share and learn from each other that sets our community apart. Learn from and support each other in our mission to champion effective design and effective design businesses.

“In times of difficulty it becomes clear who you can rely on as a business. Right through from concrete advice in webinars to hosting valuable weekly catch ups with agency leaders, there’s a real appreciation in the community for how much work has been put into delivering immediate support and solutions during the pandemic. The DBA is the best value-for-money trade association you can belong to.”

Martin Meadows, MD, Workhouse

(based in the North West with a team of 21-50 staff)

Monthly DBA Members' Forum

Representation

Become a part of the voice for design and influence its future narrative. DBA members share their ideas, priorities and concerns with us which we use to inform advice and feedback into government. The DBA holds weekly conversations with the Department for Digital, Culture, Media & Sport empowering DBA members to influence the context in which your business is operating.

“Design needs a strong voice in the commercial world – to be perceived as a business necessity rather than a cosmetic option. The DBA is the only organisation our profession has to represent us where it matters, at the centre of industry and government.”

Callum Lumsden, Creative Director, Lumsden Design
(based in London with a team of 4-10 staff)

Championing effective design

Design is the yeast in the business mix. The more recognition at the highest levels, the more baked-in design becomes. The DBA supports our members in articulating the value of design, whether that be financial, behavioural, societal or environmental.

“The DBA’s focus on design effectiveness helps train the team to think in the right way and ask the right questions of the client at the right time.”

Chris Lumsden, Managing Partner, Good

(based in Glasgow and London with a team of 21-50 staff)

Embedding effective design

The DBA supports you in your mission to prove the value of design through consultations on live case studies. Articulating the effectiveness of design comes down to the ability to measure its success. The DBA helps you develop these processes and embed them in your thinking.

“Design effectiveness is very important to us. We have now made it a central pillar of our five year plan.”

Oliver Dyer, MD, Skew

(based in London with a team of 4-10 staff)

Celebrating effective design

Judged by industry leaders, experts and CEOs of FTSE 500 businesses, and based on rigorous business case studies proving the impact of your work, the DBA Design Effectiveness Awards are one of the highest accolades in the design industry and the most rewarding to win.

“It is incredibly important to be able to clearly demonstrate the impact that investing in strategic brand design has on the success of the brands we work with. In uncertain times, the need for effective creativity and design-led thinking is especially clear. The DBA Design Effectiveness awards are a brilliant way to showcase both agency and client commitment to the power of design.”

Kerry Bolt, Co-Founder and Client Partner, B&B Studio
(based in London with a team of 21-50 staff)

Professional development

DBA membership is for the whole company, so all your colleagues can benefit in developing professionally. All our training courses are live online sessions focused on business related subjects such as: Managing People, Project Management, Presentation Skills, Expert Client Relationship Management etc.

“As a member based on the South Coast we feel that we are getting real value from the DBA webinars and online learning sessions – the whole team thanks you!”
Michael Hendry, MD, The Blueprint Design Company
(based in Plymouth with a team of 4-10 staff)

Mentoring

The DBA Twenty/Twenty programme pairs rising industry leaders with established design pioneers for a 12-month one-to-one mentoring relationship. Since launching in 2011, more than 400 participants from over 250 DBA member businesses have participated. Designed specifically for individuals who want to take their thinking around business issues, their people and themselves to the next level.

“It is incredible how utterly brilliant and sector defining the Twenty/Twenty mentoring scheme really is. I’ve now been involved in three separate cohorts and I’ve been consistently blown away by the levels of trust, professionalism, honesty and integrity that underpin the process. This, in my opinion, is the DBA at its absolute best.”

Andy Sexton, Partner & Executive Creative Director, 2LK
(based in the South East with a team of 21-50 staff)

Benchmarking

The DBA Annual Survey report gives comparison data for agencies to allow you to compare your operational effectiveness with your peers. Available free and exclusively to DBA members, the detailed analysis in the report can help you grow your business' competitiveness, inform your strategic planning and budgets, and enable you to make key decisions about your business with greater confidence.

“As a small (and sometimes isolated) business, the DBA Annual Survey Report is the only way of really knowing how we compare with other agencies. Otherwise we’re just second guessing in the dark. It’s essential in helping us to benchmark what we pay our staff and what we charge clients, in order to remain competitive.”

Andy West, Director, MultiAdaptor

(based in London with a team of 4-10 staff)

DBA Code of Conduct

The Code of Conduct is a set of model recommended practices, which have been designed and developed to provide DBA design agency members with a series of behaviour guidelines and to improve the professionalism of the industry. DBA members use the code of conduct to reflect and influence the way they run their businesses and deal with clients.

1. The first responsibility of a member is to whoever commissions the design.
2. In discharging that responsibility, members are expected to act in a competent, honourable and efficient manner.
3. Whilst members may act as consultants or as traders, and may receive payment for services or goods in a variety of ways, providing there is no conflict with their client's interests, they should disclose to the client all sources of payment before commencing work and should ensure that these are included in any offer or proposal. Similarly, members must disclose to a client any financial involvement with suppliers or sub-contractors or similar third parties involved in the contract.

4. A member company should not work simultaneously on competitive projects without informing the clients involved.
5. Members should not divulge to any other party information about a client, that is confidential or might be detrimental to his business. This confidentiality may by agreement be limited as to time. Similarly, members should not allow their staff to show work of a confidential nature to others, including potential employers, without prior written agreement.
6. Members should not give or receive substantial benefits which might cause an obligation to any party in a contract and therefore not best serve the interests of the design commissioner.
7. Members shouldn't take part in pitches that require unpaid work. The level of payment for pitches should relate to the time and effort involved.
8. Members may promote their services by all normal commercial means such as advertising or public relations activity, providing this is legal, decent, honest and truthful.
9. Members shall not knowingly copy the work of another company or practice.
